ABSTRACT

B² A music-oriented game device allowing the use of a commercially available music information storage medium, such as a commercially available music CD, or a network distribution as a means for obtaining original data of game music. A controller is operated by a player in accordance with game music, as well as game program code and game data that are stored in a CD-ROM. The game data includes operation timing data, which is necessary when using the music recorded in a predetermined commercially available music CD, as game music. The commercially available music is reproduced as game music based on the recorded content of the commercially available music CD, and instructions and guidance are provided on a monitor based on the operation timing data with respect to the timing for a player to operate the controller in accordance with the game music is provide to the player.
